- We motivate the use the construction of language product lines.

- We propose a reverse engineering technique to automatically build up language product lines from exiting DSL variants.

- We validate our approach in a set of DSL variants for finite state machines.